Dear friends and colleagues,

At the ISREV conference in Ottawa (2010) for researchers in RE I first invited colleagues to use the opportunity to present themselves and their research on a Swedish web site for religious educators. Today the website has started and is slowly growing. Have a look on the page www.rpi.se and look under “Educators”! But we want to get many more!

Who are we? RPI is a Swedish network for RE. Members are institutions involved in teaching, training and educating in RE such as universities, folk high schools, churches and others. I myself am the director of RPI.

One important obligation for us but also – as I guess – a pleasure for all researchers is to inform the broader society and colleagues about research in the different fields of RE. This information is also important for all kinds of RE teachers and practitioners in the academy, in schools, in religious communities and families.

You are invited to send me your information. Use the attached formula; add or cut off if needed. We will only look through your own presentation to make sure of the uniformity and to make it as reader-friendly as possible, and publish it on our web site (www.rpi.se). All texts will be published in English. Send us also a photo of yourself and – if you want – some illustrations for the text.

My hope is that this web site will be a real help for many RE educators and researchers and – in the future – grow to be a site of high scientific quality with developed possibility to find information for special interests.
