

"Make a difference: become a teacher." This kind of advertisement can be found on many corners of the street – nowadays and worldwide. Teachers and educators apparently are considered to be agents of change in communities.

What makes them special? What is the scope of their profession? How do they respond professionally to their vocation in a globalized world? And what would be the specific contribution of the religious educator or the religious education teacher to larger communities of educational practice?

The 2016 REA conference in Pittsburgh will bring together passionate scholars and reflective practitioners with a vision on teaching for a new world.

4-6 November
Wyndham Grand
Pittsburgh Downtown
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

REA Annual Meeting 2016 generating hope

The Future of the Teaching Profession in a Globalized World

local on-site registration available
$50 per half-day (excludes meals)

<http://religiuseducation.net/rea2016>

The Religious Education Association (REA) is an Association of Professors, Practitioners, and Researchers in Religious Education

